Ted Malone's Westinghouse Radio Overseas Broadcast on 14 July 1944 in France (20 minutes).
 Audiocassette. NBC Blue Network war correspondent Gordon Fraser's report from Manhay, Ardennes, Belgium, ca 8 Jan. 1945. He interviewed Col. William B. Lovelady, CCB & Col. George Garton, CCB.

"The Treasury Salutes" program on the December 21-25, 1944 action of Lt. Col. Samuel Hogan's unit in the Ardennes, the "Battle of Hogan's Men". Audiocassette.

With background sound effects, the narrator described attacks on German positions at Hotton, Belgium, taking a position at LaRoche, encirclement, establishing road blocks around Marcouray, abandoning equipment and hiking out of the encirclement. The program is followed by an account by Major Travis Brown of Col. Howze's 3rd Bn. of the 33rd Armored Regiment, a part of Task Force Hogan. (45 minutes).

Brown's 1981 account was from G-2 reports. He described encounters with German detachments and his escape with several others via Marche.

Charles R. Corbin videocassette, "Battle of the Bulge", 2 hours, color (2 copies), March 29, 1990

Videotape of trip Charles Corbin took on Sept. 22-Oct. 13, 1989 to cities in Belgium, Germany and Luxembourg that were involved in the Battle of the Bulge. Narration describes the activities of the opposing forces in the battle, especially the role of Task Force Lovelady. Corbin relates his experiences in December, 1944, primarily in Parfondroy and Stavelot. The cities covered in Corbin's trip were Monschau, Germany; Clervaux, Luxembourg; and Baugnez, Stavelot, Bastogne, Spa, La Gleize, Grand Coe, Trois Ponts, Parfondroy, Malempre, Manhay, and Grandmenil, Belgium. Sites visited include a memorial to victims of the Malmedy Massacre at Baugnez, a museum on the Battle of the Bulge in La Gleize, houses in Parfondroy where Corbin stayed in 1944, and roads to Houffalize which the 3rd Armored Division took to meet the 3rd Army in January, 1945.

Charles R. Corbin videocassette, "3rd Armored Division Museum, Frankfurt, West Germany", 50 minutes, color, Oct. 18, 1989

Guided tour of the museum given by its curator, Dan Peterson. Cases include displays of medals; layout of the division; training at Camp Polk; the five campaigns the division was involved in during World War II, with maps, photographs, newspaper articles, uniforms, rifles, machine guns, and other equipment; the division at Ft. Knox, 1947-56; and its tour of duty in Europe since 1956. A large room in the museum contained a life-size diorama of a German town, with an armored personnel carrier, jeep and command car. A display of vehicles outside the museum includes armored trucks, jeeps, and Patton and Pershing tanks.

Robert F. Kauffman videocassette, "Behind the Headlines - Return to the Battle of the Bulge", 55 minute, 1/2" color videotape of program by Dick Dean of station WFMZ in Pennsylvania, broadcast in November-December 1990.

Kauffman described infantry arriving in halftracks for an assault on Grandmenil. Under artillery fire they reached the town, where five tanks took positions and the infantry found shelter in a basement. To extricate themselves, they called in artillery fire on their own position. In the assault, a German tank round killed Lt. Millets and Pvt. Lester Wertman. The infantry withdrew to a stone barn and left the town. A colonel ordered a new attack, which succeeded against machine gun fire. The videotape contains a mixture of World War II combat photographs and 1990 shots of the locations described. In transitions, Belgians are giving directions and there are scenes of American war memorials. Kauffman interviewed German veterans of the Bulge. The tape includes an interview with Jack Kampf of the Third Parachute Division, who said that there was no enthusiasm but a willingness to obey. He added that the first time he thought Germany would lose the war was on 18 January 1945. Kauffman stated that his war experiences 46 years ago were "invaluable."

Bill Barron, 32nd Armored Regiment, interview on September 11, 1992

Interviewer compares his visits to U.S.S. Arizona Memorial in Hawaii and Malmedy massacre site. Eleven 32nd Armored Regiment men were shot there.

Barron tells his story.

Captured at 11 a.m., 17 December 1944 while on a reconnaissance mission. 1st Lt. Thomas McDermott was in charge. Barron and Sgt. Anderson were chosen as two of three jeep drivers as Germans proceeded toward American lines. Barron tended a wounded German soldier. Germans took his shoes near St. Vith. Many 106th and 99th Division soldiers captured. Held five days. Walked a long way to POW camp. Worked digging gun emplacements at Falmmersheid. Broke a Red Cross box and took contents. Had no food for five days. American master sergeants were "taken care of" after the war. Lost weight to 110 pounds on 6' 1".

12 February 1945. Got to Stalag 4B between Leipzig and Dresden. Dehydrated. Lice. Needed shots. Italian medics gave tetanus shots.

23 April 1945. Russians on horseback with sabers liberated us. On Monday, Russians arrived. 12,000 Russians, 10,000 British, 2,000 Americans. Germans left Friday. Russians kept them 13 days. Walked 13 km to German town for six or seven days. Russians kept Americans prisoners to get food allowance. Walked out toward Torgau. Eventually got to Americans. Germans had vicious dogs in the compounds. Prisoners had BBC news.

Henri Rogister of Liege, Belgium asked about Malmedy.

I was in a lead vehicle that met German tanks. SS tanker killed a civilian kid on a motor bike. Americans hit a German fuel vehicle with a mortar shell. Many Germans were killed. We had to bury them. Gruesome. Buried Germans first and left the Americans. Resistance at the American lines. Malmedy massacre occurred soon after capture.
